The writer is admiring laziness that activeness which leads towards wrong decisions is evil. The writer argues that devil is the most active in this world but that activeness only creates immoral behaviour. The laziness cannot be held responsible for the confused situation in the world but it is that misguided actions and decisions that created chaos in the world. The world would be in a better position if those held the realm of power set idle instead of making futile decisions. The world can still become peaceful if the stakeholders abstain from participation in conferences and prefer to prefer to sit idle. Various groups and organisations have further deteriorated the situation by actively engaged in nothing but futile meetings.
