Title = A visit to Cherokee

The author had difficulties to choose a place for tour but he became happy when John suggested Cherokee, a country in Oklahoma, for visit. They visited Qualla Boundary which was very beautiful. It presents image of Cherokee to the visitors. Despite language difficulty they came to a shop with the help of people where they met with a George, a shopkeeper. He invited them for lunch and told about his daily work. He used to cut wood before his shop. They learnt from him that the people of Cherokee have other means of income also than trade only. As at Friday a large Bingo hall was opened where different kinds of games were played. These games attracted many people. At the end they visited a museum then they came back to home. The author missed Cherokee very much.
