

« When the world throws you lemons, make lemonade »

Introduction

Every challenge provides an opportunity for growing and development. Life is so unpredictable. At every step, it poses new challenges. Many of us regard these challenges as recipes for disaster. These people are incapable to withstand these adversities and blame others for "throwing them the lemons". On the other hand, there are people, who accept these challenges, seek opportunities in them and utilize them for achieving greater benefits. These people are courageous people who struggle against every odd and find a way out of every adversity. They don't blame others for their failures and use their ability of hard work and dedication to turn the thrown lemons, i.e. adversities, into lemonade, i.e. opportunities.

- a) All of us face adversities but some of us make opportunities out of it.
- b) Adversity defines a man
- c) Blaming others only is incompetence
- d) Finding opportunity in adversity makes a change
- e) Blaming others for own incompetence - The root cause of our current crises
- f) Hard work, dedication and consistency - A recipe for making the best lemonade -
- g) The ones who know the art of making lemonade are inspiration for others
- h) The prominent figures ~~who~~ were faced by adversities

Conclusion

Do not waste water if you are at a running stream

Introduction

Water is a precious commodity that needs to be used efficiently and sustainably. Islam presses on its sustainable use to avoid its wastage and conserve it for future generations. In modern world, the shortage of water has become a dilemma for many countries and regions. The wastage of water resulting from its inefficient use is exacerbating the shortage with each passing day. According to many experts, if steps were not taken for its conservation and sustainable use, countries ~~which~~ like Pakistan, which are currently ^{listed as} water stressed, will turn into water scarred, with a formidable gap between demand and availability. It is, therefore, the need of the hour to stick strictly to the mentioned prophetic tradition (Hadith) and avoid inefficient and unsustainable use of water.

Meaning Purposive Education

Introduction

Education is not a just a set of theories and principles that are learnt and transferred to the succeeding generations, rather, it provides for a complete set of values and norms that promotes peace and prosperity in a society, and preserve the moral values of a nation. Through the concept of purposive education, moral and democratic values like: tolerance, Co-existence, Pluralism and optimism are promoted in the society. Purposive education, through moral values, establishes a culture where truth, honesty, harmony and mutual cooperation prevails.

Eradicating the menaces of corruption, injustice, intolerance, polarization in the society, terrorism and extremism are among the main purposes of Education. Purposive education promotes patriotism, Preserve our cultural values and dispels negative propagandas and pessimistic views. Purposive education makes the life easy by implementing the scientific and technological advancements for the wellbeing of people.