Human inventions move the societies Backward

Introduction

Human being has always been in a quest to invent new things to make his life easy and comfortable. These inventions, though aimed at betterment, bring certain ~~evils~~ ^{evils} with it. The major of these evils are ~~society~~ related to society. Human inventions make the lives easy, thereby, minimizing human's role and hence, his interaction with the society. This renders the human socially isolated. Human inventions degrade the morality in the society. ~~by~~ Inventions bring certain loopholes with it which provide a vulnerable area for propagandas and misinformation. These curses fade the moral values of Truth and mutual trust. The propagandas and misinformation are the major tools that erode social cohesion and sow the seeds of hatred. Through this tool, religious sects and ethnic groups are incited to commit the crimes of extremism & terrorism. Human inventions, in this way, bring benefits to humanity on one hand & move their societies backward on the other.

Expanding Information Technology ; A Curse or Blessing -

Introduction

The field of information technology has expanded vigorously over the recent decades which has benefited the human greatly. Alongside its beneficial role in our day to day life, information technology have brought certain evils with it. Information technology, as explicated by many as ^{the} third industrial revolution after steam engine and electricity, has made the world's remote countries and localities accessible and explorable. It has made the globe so vast into ^{and} entity so small and coverable through advanced communication techniques that it is now referred to as global village. The advent and expansion of information technology is regarded by many as a curse to humanity. This view makes sense in the backdrop of the major problems like : misinformation, cyberattacks, information theft and other important issues related with information technology.

Is colonial mentality impeding Pakistan's Progress?

Introduction

Even after 76 years of independence, Pakistan is deeply entangled into British mentality that hinders every aspect of development. The British colony has left deep imprints on every sphere, be that is political, social or economic. The British legacy of centralized power ~~still~~ is still a driving force in our politics. The social domination of British mentality is drastically affecting our society and economy. The inferiority complex - which is the outcome of ~~the~~ colonial legacy - makes our people more inclined towards western culture and products. This results into the degradation of ^{our} cultural values and local industries. The environment of our country still supports feudalism and power centralism. These twin menaces leave masses into a setup where corruption and nepotism prevails and rule of law and accountability diminishes. The colonial mentality is the biggest hindrance to the progress which acts as ^{an} albatross around this country's neck.
