

An old man told that there is a mountain behind the forest where that plant burgeons due to whose fragrance the lost light/sight of eyes returns, but the mountain is much higher and it has numerous rocks, thorny herbs and big stones which hinder the path. Many people came and went away to climb this mountain or to climb this mountain, many a people came and went away; however, no such person came who could reach the flower. May be that is why there is sorrow and affliction in the world and man is in the search of light.

Before the colonial English values against the flattering and obeying ways that was promoted by British rulers and which was followed by Indians in that era. Syed Ahmed Khan and his respectable and intel enlightened son Syed Mahmood both endeavored to adopt such an attitude as though there were equal and counterpart to English men. The incident of 1867's Agra Court was not only known to Muslims but also to entire Hindustani nation quite closely. Syed Ahmed Khan took separation from this Court because there Hindustanis were provided with seats of inferior rank as compared to those of English people. In this Darbar, Syed Ahmad Khan was to be awarded with a medal. Later on, Williams, the commissioner of Meerath was given this responsibility of presenting the medal to Syed Ahmed Khan by reaching the railway station.
