Precis: Title: Oracles: Greek's way to interact with god

Man's fear and feebleness that was due to ~~mighty~~ nature led him to believe in superpowers, as a regulator of universe and controller of his own fate. However, knowledge that was imperative in this cause, was being sent in the form of oracles, unearthed by soothsayers who had the power to apprehend the signs and signals of the gods. Moreover, the soothsayers interpreted natural phenomena, flashes of lightning, storms, flights of birds and sacrificing animals to utter their oracles. Not only this, they also interpret dreams and palmistry. However, sometimes gods instead of showing signs to the soothsayers they spoke directly to the devotee who then spread their words to others. This way Greek operated oracles. In Greece Apollo was the soothsayer, who unveiled Zeus words to people.
