

Sub-heading: Teachers must be tested before allowing them to teach the students

Besides, teachers must be tested before allowing them to teach the students. In this way, competent students can be produced that can lead their nations towards the safer shores. Countries must take the example of those governments that have introduced the system to assess the abilities of a teacher whether he can train students in an efficient way or not. For example, Sindh Government in Pakistan approved a teaching licence policy in May 2023, which means teachers have to get a licence to prove that they can contribute in the emotional and mental well-being of a student (Sajid Ali, 'Teaching licences', June 2023). Given this, teachers must have credentials to prove that they can perform this prestigious job.
