

Art becomes Business!

Art turns into business

Despite having religious and magical nature, Art gained Commercial status soon in market. Financial influence and museum Custodian made possible to turn art in business world. Museum holders give ~~art~~ prices of art by keeping the big artists' name in mind. Businessmen also prefer to buy expensive piece of art and believe expensive one is best. This business ~~art~~ trend started in 1980s when Japanese invested huge amount of share in West's greatest masterpiece. For example Ryoji Saito purchased Van Gogh's portrait of Dr Gachet $ 82.5 m later the Museum of modern Art became private property. Such situation is alarming as it only improves business but discouraging middle class access for art.

Translation

It is often said about some books that they have changed world. Such books are chosen by intellectuals as per their wishes or situations. But, on the one hand, books have power to change the world on the other hand, they misguide people and become the responsible to push the world into backwardness.

It can be guessed by the publication of books of any society whether these published books would change the world or want to bind in outdated traditions. In this view, if we observe the books published in Pakistan, we notice the books distort people's mind with sentiments and unnecessary national pride. This mentality is manifest in today's Pakistani society.
