

CSS 2003

If then a practical end must be assigned to a university course, I say it is that of training good members of a society. It is the art of social life and its end is fitness for the world. It neither confines its views to particular professions, on the one hand, nor creates heroes or inspires genius on the other. Works indeed of genius fall under no art; heroic minds come under no rule. University is not a birthplace of poets or of immortal authors, of founders of schools, leaders of colonies, or conquerors of nations. It does not promise a generation of Aristotles or Newtons, of Napoleons or Washingtons, of Raphaels or Shakespeares though such miracles of nature it has before now contained within its precincts. Nor is it content, on the other hand, with forming the critic or the experimentalist, the economist or the engineer, though such too it includes within its scope. But university training is the great ordinary means to a great ordinary end; it aims at raising the intellectual tone of society, at cultivating the public mind, at purifying the national taste, at supplying true principles to popular aspirations. It is the education which gives a man a clear, conscious view of his own opinions and judgments, a truth in developing them, an eloquence in expressing them and a force in urging them. It teaches him to see things as they are, to go right to the point, to disentangle a skein of thought, to detect what is sophistical and to discard what is irrelevant. It prepares him to fill any post with credit and to master any subject with facility.

(276 words)

CSS: 2003 precise:-

Title:- University: An organization produce good citizens not heroes.

Universities usually assigned practical work to the students at the end of their session. It is not linked with specific profession. It has only purpose to produce good citizens not the poets, leaders, scientists and philosopher. University only polishes the abilities of individuals by mental developmental activities. Universities help the student to see the things as they are. It is education which gives someone clear conscience and help to build an opinion. It instigate them to find truth and discard irrelevant things from relevant.

Total paragraph: 276 words
Precise paragraph: 84 words