

"Democracy without Justice is Tyranny"

Outline;

1 Introduction

Thesis statement:

It is rightly said that "Democracy without justice is tyranny, because justice always strengthens democracy being its an important."

2 Democracy and Justice

- a) What is democracy?
- b) Definition of Justice!
- c) Relationship between Democracy and Justice

3 Democracy without Justice is useless

Justice is a significant pillar of Democracy

- a) Justice always favours democracy
- b) Justice invokes people towards democracy.

5 Conclusion

"Essay"

It is rightly said that "Democracy without justice is tyranny, because justice always strengthens democracy as it is an important part of it."

These are related with one another,

for democracy without justice is useless.

It always favours democracy and stabilizes the democratic institutions contrary to ~~the~~ dictatorship or kingship. In fact, justice always motivates people towards democracy and democratic values.

Similarly, democracy and justice are like two wheel of a bicycle which can not run without ~~other~~ one wheel, the other is as important as the one. In short, democracy without justice is nothing.

Since "democracy" is the form of a government which is ruled by the people, governed by the people, its aims and objectives are serving the people, providing them facilities and their due rights. While "Justice" teaches equitation among the people. It removes all kinds of discriminations like colour, caste, language and state of poor and rich. As the purpose of democracy and justice are quite close to each other, such as "ruling and serving people without any discrimination." Therefore the relationship between democracy and justice can not be ignored, they are linked together for the same purpose. In short, democracy and justice are like beads of a paternoster.

In fact, democracy without justice is useless. Of a country or an institution proclaims of democracy, but there is no ^{justice} democracy so the proclamation of democracy is useless because in every spare of life i.e. education, health, sports, or even religious matters, justice is as important as air ~~of~~ for life. Almost the failure of democracy in developing countries, seems the low rank of justice, such as Pakistan. According to a world based survey, Pakistan ranks 148 among more than 250 countries in respect of justice and law supremacy. There it indicates everywhere democracy without justice is an idle thing.

Moreover, justice is an important pillar of democracy. Because it always promotes and favours democracy in the world.

For example let's see the list of developed countries and states, i.e. the United States of America, Great Britain, Germany, France and China.

These countries are at the peak of democracy on account of supremacy of justice and law. There is not any kind of difference among their people.

They all are equal before the law, so the result is a successful democracy. Justice also urge people to work for strengthening democracy because they come to know that, they only get their due rights in democracy. So it is believed that justice is an significant pillar of democracy.

To sum up, one may say that, Democracy and Justice are two side of a picture, without one other is useless. One should work hard to promote democracy in a state and protect democratic institutions but at the same, justice is also equal to democracy, for without justice democracy does not brings fruits. Democracy is like a tree and justice is the water for it. In short democracy without justice is a man without hands.