Expansion of Art Business

Art became a commercial venture. To ensure the market value hike, validity and earnings have been found by the entrepreneur. This market grew by a few people where cultural symbols could be traded as items. In 1980, investors invested more in the western market than Japanese share price. As Ryoji Saito bought Van Gogh's portrait at the cost of 82.5 million. Furthermore, art will spread in large businesses rapidly. Firstly, art can be certified its market worth. However, mostly world has not acquire its means. At last, the art might be transferred from private hands to investors; and rarely artists.
