Title:

A visit to an interesting and exciting place.

The writer had a tough time choosing a tour spot during his vacation last May. He was looking for interesting and exciting place instead of common countries. He becomes happy as John suggesting a trip to Cherokee. They reached Qualla Boundary a town in Cherokee by flight. The town decorated very well and presented a concise history of Cherokee to the tourists.

Difficultly, they find a souvenir shops filled with traditional things. They were impressed by the fluent English of souvenir shop owner's named George. George invited them for a lunch and said: that he has work all the day in summer, which is better than being a woodcutter. They learnt
