

Title/Topic: An Exciting Tour to Qualla Boundary, Cherokee

Precis:

It was difficult for the narrator to choose a tour during his summer holidays. He wanted to experience something exciting and new place. He finally agreed to visit Cherokee as suggested by his friend John. They visited a town there called Qualla Boundary, a type of paradise. It was rich in tribal lifestyle of past. With natives' guide, they found their way to the memorable shops. The shops were filled with various wares. He were shocked to receive a welcome invitation from a fluent English old speaker. He introduced himself as George and invited us for lunch at the end of our conversation. George told them about his hard routine during tour season and also about his low-earning work of wood cutting. They learnt the lesson of survival from the old man. For tribe 'Bingo Weekend' was one of the best way to earn income besides other means. Lastly, they visited a museum full of Cherokee cosmology. The writer really missed the place and hopeful for another new visit.
