

Topic :- War On Terror Has Led to More Human Rights Violation

OUTLINE

Introduction

Thesis Statement: The war on terror has led to more human rights political, economic, social and cultural human rights violation such as right to liberty, work, freedom, expression and education. However, by adopting certain measures like constructive vote of United Nations, implementation of Oslo accord classes and providing financial support to victims, human rights violation can be prevented.

An Overview of War on Terror

How has War on Terror Led to More Human Rights Violation?

3.1) Restricting politics - a legal right of all

(Case in point: A case study of 'Thirty Years' War')

3.2) Massive destruction of business outlets - violation of right to work

(Case in point: 97% of poor population of Afghanistan)

- 3-3) Deaths of innocent civilians due to drone attacks
(Case in point: Case study of war on terror in Afghanistan)
- 3-4) Women rapes by frustrated soldiers
(Case in point: 'Rape as a weapon of war' JSTOR)
- 3-5) Violation of right to education
(Case in point: Report of Middle East Institute on Syrian education)
- 3-6) Beating innocent civilians owing to the soldiers' aggression
(Case in point: Case study of Palestinian conflict)
- 3-7) Deprivation of health facilities in war zones
(Case in point: Health of Nigerian women)
- 3-8) Torturing terrorists' families in jail and outside the jail
(Case in point: Dr. Arifa Javed's family's disappearance)
- 3-9) Violation of freedom of speech
(Case in point: A case study of Syria)
- 3-10) Deaths of culprits in jail custody
(Case in point: Death of Qari Noor Muhammad in Pakistan in War on Terror)

Framework to Prevent Human Rights Violation

- 4.1) Implementation of clauses decided in Doha accord
- 4.2) Compensation in the form of financial aid and educational support to victims
- 4.3) Providing speedy justice to unlawfully held detainees
- 4.4) Softening immigration policies for people likely to be persecuted

Conclusion