

Title

Precis Different views about art and poetry.

Two philosophers have different opinions about an art. One of them considers that art is a source of reducing anger. The other one thinks that art is like a disease which becomes severe when art increases. He ignores the importance of art as it increases the passion in man. Another English poet tells that poetry is the name of calmness which arises immediately and is not linked with past. The poet also says that poetry is not like a disease but it has its own natural features. Poetry and art do not affect man like a disease but man thinks that both of these affect man differently. The concept of art of poet Shakespeare is different from the concept of fine arts.

Paragraph words = 440
Precis words = 120