My Favorite Subject

As a student, everyone likes some subjects more than others. These likes and dislikes are usually based on students' performance in certain subjects or the ease and difficulty they face while preparing that subject.

Personally, my favorite subject is English. Since my secondary school days, I used to get good marks in English without putting much efforts.

A part from this, another reason to like English is that I am very fond of reading English fictions. Classic English novels like "Pride and Prejudice" and "Jane Eyre" give me a real pleasure whenever I read them. Everytime I read an English piece of fiction I fall in love with it even if it is a children book. Basically, it is English that made me fond of reading.

Moreover, English as a subject does not require you to cram things rather, it is based on creativity and practice as well. It gives you a good deal of margin to express your creativity and skills that are sometimes limited in other cramming-based subjects.

So, as a student I like English the most and I always try to be better in it and polish my English skills whether they are related to listening, speaking, reading or writing English.
