

Precis Year 1993

"The Benefits of Intellectual Gift"

according to the author

It has been described by the author that a best gift one can give is an intellectual gift, rather than some material gift. Material gift requires no effort to be incorporated, while intellectual gift requires efforts to make it as own. However, material gift makes people dependant while a gift of knowledge makes people independent. Gift of knowledge has everlasting effect while other gifts have no permanent effects. The helping foundations should follow the provision of intellectual aids rather than material thing. As a small ~~some~~ sum of money can buy a person materials of thier basic day need, but the same amount of money can help you to teach hundreds of people and make them free and independant.

main idea is picked and discussed there are punctuation issues dont use extra words in precise over all precise content is satisfactory 8/20 word count is missing it is an essential part of precise