Modern Education System: Its Flaws and Solutions

Author identifies two flaws in modern education system. The first flaw in modern education system is that it pays minimum attention to socialization and interaction with children. Children are treated like pets, as a result, they will act like machines and only obey commands. Furthermore, children are used as instrument of power and sacrifice for their parents. No-children will like this type of treatment. The second flaw in modern education system is that teachers are overburden/loaded down. Consequently teachers lose their inherent love for children and get fatigued. Therefore, children should be treated with love and selflessness. This will help to cultivate bond with children and make them. And, teacher should teach two hours a day. So, he will feel less burdened and will teach with affection without harming students mental health.
