

Education System in Pakistan

Education plays a significant role in the progress of a country. The education system in Pakistan is also responsible for the progress of its economic system. Because students get education and perform according to their skills in the progress of a country. In Punjab, literacy rate is 67%, which is higher than that of all other provinces. There is a lack of technical education, by which students fail to perform technically. Language is also an important key to deliver knowledge, but unfortunately in Pakistan, government schools provide education in Urdu medium. And the private schools provide education in English medium. People are unable to understand it completely because of this gap. Government should take measures to improve the formal and informal education so that the future of the Pakistan is bright. Because education is a key to progress, and it is only possible with the help of making better educational policies.
