“Climate changes encourage Human efforts”

The mild temperature in the regions of Northern Europe suggests that cold weather is beneficial to humans. It encourages him to face the challenges. In a moderately cold weather, man is organized and makes a lot of efforts to obtain food, shelter and other necessities of life. In contrast, tropical regions have more comfort and there is little need to utilize one's efforts and energies. Therefore, like temperate and tropical climates, different seasons in a year have different impacts on human nature. In summer, feelings of relaxation is more, while in winter, one is more inclined to physical and mental efforts.
