

Title/Topic: An Exciting Tour to Qualla Boundary, Cherokee

Precis:

It was difficult for the narrator to choose a tour during his summer holidays. He wanted to experience ^{an} ~~another~~ exciting and new place. He finally agreed to visit Cherokee as suggested by his friend John. They visited a town there called Qualla Boundary, a type of paradise. It was rich in tribal lifestyle of that. With natives' guide, they found their way to the memorable shops. The shops were ^{They} filled with various ^{was} items. ^{He} They were shocked to receive a welcome invitation from a fluent English old speaker. He introduced himself as George and invited ^{them} ~~us~~ for lunch at the end of our conversation. George told them about his hard routine during tour season and also about his low earning work of wood cutting. ^{Use of first person is strictly prohibited. Too long. Precise should be one third of the passage. Grammar is ok. Idea generally ok.} They learnt the term of survival from the old man. For tribe 'Bingo Weekend' was one of the best way to earn income besides other means. Lastly, they visited a museum full of Cherokee cosmology. The writer really missed the place and ^{was} hopeful for another new visit.