Q: It is physically impossible .... but still second.

It is impractical for a rational ~~man~~ person to make money his primary goal. For such men, food <sup>too</sup> is secondary; for they hold duty over monetary benefits. Similarly, a soldier should win, ~~but~~ not for his pay, which is vital to him; but for the sake of winning. A clergyman's duty too should ~~p~~ supersede his payment. A doctor should also choose curing people over his fee. Thus, for all rational men: duty is primary; and money, although very important, is secondary.
