John and I planned to spend our vacations in Cherokee, Oklahoma. We had a trip to Qualls Boundary. A beautiful town with natural beauty surrounded it. It reflected the tradition of the 18th century. Later, we went to shops that were full of rubber, wsr bonnets and turkey feathers. An old man namely George welcomed and offered us lunch. During lunch, he told that Cherokees can not only survive on trad-based economy. So, people strive for other means of income, too. In fact, the most convenient is "Bingo Weekend." A large bingo hall is arranged with fun of several games such as, Super Jackpot and Warrier Game to earn for needed income. In the end, we visited museum that was full of fascinated art of Qualls Boundary. Hence, we missed Qualls Boundary.
