

Is a Multipolar World Beneficial For or Detrimental to Globalisation?

1- Introduction

Thesis Statement: The phenomenon of globalisation can thrive as well as decline in a multipolar world. Besides its detrimental effects, multipolarity has boosted the progress of globalisation. By taking crucial measures, its negative impacts are also minimized.

2- How a multipolar world is beneficial for or detrimental to Globalisation

3- Why a multipolar world is beneficial for Globalisation (Thesis)

a) Multiple powers working together

b) Diversity in policies and strategies.

- c) Ease in movement of people
- d) Increased competency in trade-related activities.
- e) A collective response to global ~~issues~~ issues.

4. Declining Globalisation in a multipolar age. (Antithesis)

- a) Arise of conflict in working together.
- b) Policies may lack a view point of smaller states.
- c) Sense of discrimination among people
- d) Alienation of incompetent economies
- e) Pursuance of national interest in addressing global issues.

5. Advantages of multipolar world for Globalisation possess an edge over its harmful effects.

a) A unified force of significant powers,

b) Comprehensive policies covering various aspects of globalisation

c) Increased people-to-people contacts

d) Enhancement of trade

e) Resolution of global problems

6. Conclusion.