

Subheading: The US disrupts democracy

The US disrupts democracy in different countries of the world. Thus, its claim to be the champion of democracy is nothing but a sham. Throughout its history, it disturbed democratic process in countries where it was given a chance to do so. For example, the US, along with several European countries, rejected the legitimacy of the president of Venezuela Mr. Maduro back in 2019, even though he won a popular vote. And the US declared an un-known parliamentarian, Juan Guaido interim president (Aneela Shahzad, 'Arrested democracy', May 2023). Given all that, the US is not a promoter of democracy in the world.
