Topic 1 : Paragraph Writing is a skill

Paragraph writing, indeed, is a skill to master through regular practice. Paragraph is a series of sentences that are organized, coherent, and ~~all are~~ related to a single idea or topic.

Therefore, the art of paragraph writing can be learnt through a continuous practice. For instance, it is just like learning to drive. If a person wants to become a good driver, he needs to learn the rules of driving and then he, himself, should drive as much as possible. That is how that person would become a good driver. The same case can be applied to ^{the} writing skills as well. Of course, the more an individual writes, the better writer he will become. In fact, good writers of this era were beginners and there were many faults in their writings initially, but through time and practice, they mastered this skill and now they are renowned writers.

Moreover, it is said, ~~that~~ "Practice makes a man perfect." Also those dancing moves are the easiest which have been learnt through proper practice.

Hence, ~~para~~ paragraph writing is a skill and it needs a practice in order to become inert in it.
