Nothing sharpens a man's wits like poverty. Hence many of the greatest men have originally been poor men. Poverty often purifies and braces a man's morals. To spirited people, difficult tasks are usually the most delightful ones. If we may rely upon the testimony of history, men are brave, truthful and magnanimous not in proportion to their wealth, but in proportion to their smallness of means. And the best are often the poorest--always supposing that they have sufficient to meet their temporal wants. A divine has said that God has created poverty but He has not created misery. And there is certainly a great difference between the two. While honest poverty is honourable, misery is humiliating, inasmuch as the latter is for the most part the result of misconduct and often of idleness and drunkenness. Poverty is no disgrace to him who can put up with it, but he who finds the beggar's staff get warm in his hand, never does any good but a great amount of evil.

The poor are often the happiest of people--far more so than the rich, but though they may be envied, no one will be found willing to take their place. Moore has told the story of the over-fed, over-satisfied Eastern despot who sent a messenger to travel through the world in order to find out the happiest man. When discovered, the messenger was immediately to seize him, take his shirt off his back and bring it to the Chief. The messenger found the happiest man in an Irishman -- happy, dancing and flourishing his shillelagh. But when the ambassador proceeded to seize him and undress him, he found that the Irishman had no shirt to his back.

Translation

After getting down from car, when I reached the platform, I became nervous. There were people of every city and were speaking every language. How can I forget all those pains which I bore during the journey. But I was feeling nervous while entering this alien city. Neither I have dearest one nor any relative there. All departed in the way. In the last, I took courage and went out from the station.

Answer

A newly married couple can make his life happy and comfortable through mutual cooperation, tolerance, and presence. Moral values are significant in making one's life happy and comfortable.

Marriage is a vital part (لازمی حصہ) of life and like any other partnership of business (کاروبار میں شرکت), it has its periods of depression (مایوسی کے دور) and periods of elation (خوشی کے دور). The same principles used in business can profitably (فائدے) be employed (استعمال) in marriage; patience (صبر), willingness (آمادگی) to sacrifice (قربانی) and tolerance (توت) help to avoid (بچنا) friction (جھگڑا). Why the monotony (بوجھ، بیزاری) of household duties, weighs us, when we never get to remember as in other aggravations. "This too shall be away". The household disorder (بدانتظامی) caused by children is only for a short period in life. All too quickly it ceases. The aggravations (پریشانیاں) and inconvenience (متکالیف) of constant illness (مستقل بیماری) also pass away and are a part of life and not a marriage. The sleepless nights pass, and all too soon, we have more time than we desire for sleep. The poor men and women have no monopoly (اجارہ داری) on the cares and worries (پریشانیاں) in life. Rich and poor share (حصہ دار ہونا) alike (یکساں طور پر) in the experiences. Separately, man and woman cannot find happiness. Together they can give it to the future generations (مستقبل کی نسلیں).
