2- Youth Bulge in Pakistan an asset or liability

The youth bulge in Pakistan as an asset or liability can be demonstrated by UNDP report on August 28, 2023. According to report, the youth forms 64% of the Pakistan's total population, but a meagre portion of 6% get higher education, while more than one-quarter of them, 29% have got no education at all. The report said only 4% of the country's youngsters were actively pursuing employment, while 57% of them remained out of touch to seek employment. Adding to that 39% of young people faced significant gender disparity while many of them have limited access to the internet, cell phones, libraries and sports facilities. Without interventions however, the report warned, the current labour force participation and unemployment rates could not accommodate this influx. To address this, about 1-3 million jobs needs to be created.

annually over the next five years to reduce unemployment. This shows the alarming situation of youth bulge in Pakistan. However, by harnessing the youth for positive change can mitigate the crisis.

We hope education encourages people to be creative to build a future, to make progress but that's partly, because education raises expectations of action reward, that people will invest and be rewarded for making those efforts. It turns out that when those expectations are not met when people find their education does not lead to opportunities or advancement. They are often drawn to ideological radicalism indeed if they encounter corruption blocking opportunities, constricted economic options and a lack of personal freedom. They often become advocates of radical change. It's worth recalling that the American Unabomber and Osama Bin Laden. One thing they had in common was an engineering education and a diagnosis of western values as the source of trouble in the world.
