

Russia AND USA Relations with. Pakistan.

The Super powers play a significant role on the chess board of international politics in shaping the destinies of developing countries. The creation of Bangla Desh is a classic example of super power's strategies, when the internal situation of a country was internationalised in a way that a new country was brought into existence through diplomacy and war.

Partition of Pakistan:

The partition of India, West and East Pakistan two noncontiguous territories that shared a dominant religion of Islam but were very different in terms of language, ethnicity and culture. In 1970, parliamentary elections, an overwhelming number of East Pakistanis voted for political party that advocated autonomy for the East, but it was blocked from governing by the Army and the existing Pakistani government, and its leader was jailed. The resulting mass protests in East were brutally suppressed by Pakistani Army which caused a massive refugee movement into neighboring India. East Pakistani guerrilla forces, supported by India, fought with Pakistani Army in the late autumn of 1971. West Pakistan responded with air attacks on India, resulting in open war.

between the two powers begining on Dec 3.

Role of USA to Crises:

The USA faced several dilemmas in how to respond to the crises. The regional situation was already complex. India signed a treaty of mutual assistance with Soviet Union in August 1971. and People's Republic of China was friendly to Pakistan and had fought a war with India in 1962. But the United States acted in somewhat ambiguous manner during the brief 1971 war.

By not ordering direct intervention, the United States also conveyed to both India and Pakistan the message that US commitment to intervention in South Asia had limits. This ambiguity would produce negative results for US influence in the region. Pakistan was expecting aid from US but he remained uncooperative and supported India against Pakistan.

Turning Point of Pakistan Foreign Policy:

The United States was having idea of strategic partnership with India, and was supporting them against Pakistan. By realizing this reality we turned our foreign policy towards Russia during the reign of Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. He floated the idea of Islamic socialism, economic reform, land reform and educational reform. Bhutto turned the policy of traditional security towards the advanced nuclear Security. He actually realised that no country will support Pak, ~~if~~. Pakistan itself will not support it. He forcefully advocated the nuclear option and famously said "if India builds the bomb, we will eat grass or leaves, even go hungry, but we will get one of our own." Because Bhutto believed that developing nuclear weapons would provide Pakistan with a deterrent against potential aggression from India. Bhutto believed that possessing nuclear capabilities would enhance Pakistan's standing in the international community. But he was criticized by United Nation, international agencies and especially United States. Yet he managed to call an OIC summit in 1974.

Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC).

Zulfikar Ali Bhutto played a vital role in this massive event. He had used his diplomatic skills to perfection in making possible this summit which had combined all the leaders of the Islamic world on one platform. Pakistan was at that time struggling to find its feet back after the defeat at the hands of India in 1971 and the consequent secession of Bangladesh. It was a landmark achievement of his government that it was able to make Pakistan the center of the world attention once again. He had also ended Pakistan's isolation in the world community.

US - Pakistan Relationship Breakdown:

US-Pakistan relations never evolved into a deep strategic partnership due to absence of shared long term interests. US opposition to Pakistan's nuclear policy, and political aid from the Muslim Block created tensions, which were going to hammered American Capitalism. Bhutto was lured by the US but he wasn't conventional. America tried to put sanctions on Pakistan and we were already lacking resources. But Bhutto got pledge from China, and Arab countries. Gaddafi and Shah-faisal supported Pak. financially but on the term that this nuclear bomb will help out Arab countries in need. This is why, it called Islamic Nuclear bomb. But things were not meant to remain rosy forever. In 1977 Henry Kissinger (former
