Role: The Role of language in the civilization of human Beings.

According to many anthropologists, man ^{is} ~~are~~ both homo sapiens and homo faber. It is the language that creates a difference between these two terms. If a person will become a hairless chimpanzee, he will lose the high IQ and secondary importance of knowledge and broadcasting of information. Without language, accumulation of knowledge and broadcasting of information is not possible. Language has played an important role in the formulation of ethical ideas and expression of religious insight. Without language, a person turned into a nutshell, and gave birth to civilization.
