~~Title~~ = Different schools of thought on freedom of education.

~~Points~~:-

The author highlights the three prevalent perspectives of freedom in education. The first group advocates complete freedom for children whatever their behaviour. The second group believes in absolute authority, regardless of child behavior. However, the third group believes in freedom, but with expectation of moral perfection, which is not supported by observations of animals and babies. He argued that education, from a social perspective should provide opportunities for growth and development, including mental and moral development, which can't be achieved solely by children on their own. He disagreed with the third group, which is too individualistic and neglects the importance of knowledge.

Title

"Reality of TV Ads"

~~Intro:-~~

Television advertisement are not getting more realistic. They makers portray Unreal Situation. The gap between reality and ~~unreality~~ ^{illusions} are vast. The advertisement they make are not according standard life of our societies. They want to buy a specific using our fictional stories but not succeeded. They spend a lot of money on that but the viewers only watched it as they have no options or laughs at it. And later they complain about it.
