Understanding The Psyche of Children

According to the author,

I think the modern educational theorists focus more on the negative impact of one's absence from a child's life than the positives of spending quality time with them. If the children have affection for you, they are more likely to be obedient. No child would be grateful if they are treated as a social project or ~~an outlet~~ be dominated. Teachers ^{who} have the ability love children unconditionally are able to tackle them better. Sadly, overburdened teachers are like the ~~proverbial confectioner's apprentice~~ towards macarons. I donot think that education should be a vacation as long working hours can cause tiredness and annoyance that they may express. However, it is ~~not~~ necessary to exercise self control or different treatment for mischievous students as they will be compliant if they like you.
