

Only a healthy Population can Be an Asset for a country.

Outline

1) Introduction:

Thesis Statement: Having a healthy population is indispensable for a country to prosper. An unhealthy, unequipped population can only contribute little, if not nothing, towards a country's growth. By devising meticulous policies aimed at human development, a country can be set on the path of prosperity and development.

2) The contribution of a robust and healthy population to a nation's economic cannot be overstated.

3) How is a healthy population an asset for a country

a) A self-sustained population is not a burden on the government.

b) A healthy population can stimulate economic activity in a country

c) A politically literate and cognisant populace has the capacity to question and hold government accountable for any violations.

Day / Date

- d) A well equipped and nurtured population can provide services to international employers, resulting in an influx of finance into the country.
 - e) A healthy population can contribute towards a sustainable and environment friendly country.
- 4) Impediments that stand in the way of a healthy population.
- a) Many governments are apathetic towards spending on human development
 - b) Patriarchal-driven households bar women from acquiring education.
 - c) High inflation rates can result in child labour and abandonment of educational careers.
 - d) Pervasive poverty in a country hinder human-development.
 - e) Poor health infrastructure can lead to premature deaths.
- 5) Ways to circumvent the challenges
- a) Investing in education and health sectors
 - b) Providing scholarships and free education to the underprivileged.
 - c) Investing in renewable energy sources
 - d) Concocting meticulously designed policies aimed at human development.
 - e) Enact laws that guarantee rights to women.
 - f) Conclusion.

Maxim.....