

A Society that has more Justice is a society that needs less charity

Outline:

1) Introduction

Thesis:

A just society always forecasts less dependency upon charities, because, justice addresses the root causes of any problem and <sup>explores</sup> various alternatives for equal opportunities while, charities can only provide short-term solutions.

2) Understanding Justice and Charities:

3) How Justice Address root causes of any Problem?

3.1) Justice always empowers individuals and communities to improve their conditions

3.2) Just societies ensures integrity of a nation remain intact

3.3) Marginalization and segregations can be only evaded through Justice

3.4) Justice can also address the biasedness in policy implementations

3.5) Justice ensures the eradication of trust deficit b/w rulers and ruled

4) How Justice ensures delivery of equal opportunities?

4.1) Justice always leads to equal opportunities in education and skill development

4.2) Justice mirrors the broader claims; irrespective of social status

4.3) Justice flowers equality under its watchful eye of inclusivity

4.4) Justice counters the myopic approach of ruling class under which only class-based treatment is followed

4.5) Justice ensures merit everywhere and enables people to work hard for a greater cause

5) How Charities provide only short-term solutions?

5.1) Charities ~~have~~ offers limited response to problems in hand; yielding short-term results

5.2) Causal roots of the issue are not properly addressed through charities

5.3) Charities are only suitable for emergency situations

5.4) Charities are individual oriented mechanisms having less emphasis in collective benefits.

Critical Analysis: Justice vs. Charity

Conclusion

During ancient times where humans were subjected to increasingly violent purges, devoid of any empathetic concerns, the world mirrors only chaos and anarchy. The fundamental human ~~rights~~ rights were at stake less alone the other rights. The sickening fate of humanity was mainly characterized by selfishness for the sake of which nations were slaughtered. At this very point, when humanity was at the jaws of death, there comes a messiah in the shape of justice to restore human faith for a better tomorrow. Prior to this, there was still a committed dedicated minority who leaped forward to help the suppressed ones in form of donations. However, it doesn't have a lasting impact like justice. All this tough sledding was evolved into justice that has revolutionized the fate of humanity. Justice weighs much more than the charities when it comes to mushrooming growth of a society. Justice always take a stock of root problems and offers solutions for its redressal, where equality stands exposed; however, charities can only ~~dissect~~ mitigate the intensity of any underlying issue for short span of time.

(180 words)