

Women Empowerment and National Development

Date 06.10.2023

Outline

1. Introduction

Thesis Statement: Women empowerment is a sin-quon-non for national development of a country, which can contribute to the national development in multilateral ways.

2. Contextualizing key terms

A. Women empowerment

B. National development

3. How Empowering Women Contributes to National Development

A. Increased workforce participation in economy case in point: Bangladesh's textile industry

B. Establishment of an equitable society case in point: Scandinavian countries Sweden in particular

C. Improved literacy rates with educating women.

case in point: New Zealand a flag bearer of women empowerment with top literacy rates

D. Vibrant civil society inclusive of women case in point: United States civil society

E. Population control

- Empowered women make informed decisions

F. Alleviation of poverty to a greater extent

Case in point: Singapore's transformation from Singlore to Singapore

G. Equitable governance keeping in view both men and women

H. Participatory political system

Case in point: Germany as a sole model of participatory politics

I. Policy formation keeping focusing men and women

4. Empowering Women - A Roadmap

A. Ensuring education of women

B. Enactment of prudent laws safeguarding women

C. Providing equal employment opportunities to women

D. Ensuring participation of and representation of women in political sphere

E. Formation of policies aimed at making women financially independent

5. Case Study of Singapore Singapore

Posits Empowerment of Women

A Sine-Que-Non for National Development

6. Conclusion

Essay

Date 06.10.2023

Societies which have empowered women have achieved the milestone of national development. Empowering women alludes to empowering more than half of the world's population, given the majority women population of the world. Empowering women refers to providing women quality education, access to healthcare, inclusion of women in political arena, and formulating policies that aim at safeguarding women at all levels. By doing so, the milestone of national development can be achieved successfully. One might wonder how empowering women would accomplish national development? The answer to the question lies in the following. Empowering women would result in increased workforce participation, an equitable society, equitable governance, vibrant and literate society, and informed decision by women. All of this would contribute to the national development of a country in positive manner. It is the secret behind astonishing national development of countries in the western world and Singapore in particular. The essay will establish the fact that empowering women sets the stage for national development and will provide a road map to ~~set~~ empower women.

Signature _____

No. _____