

Title: Freedom in Education Importance of Education

The Author highlights the three prevalent schools of thought on freedom in education. The first one favors the freedom of children, regardless of their behaviour. The second one favours some restrictions over children, regardless of their behaviour.

The third group says that children should be free but they should always be good.

The author opposes this idea.

According to him, the co-operation needed for our community is not possible without positive education. Also, from the social point of view, education should provide some mental and moral equipments to children.
