In every country people imagine that they are the best and the cleverest and the others are not so good as they are. The Englishman thinks that he and his country are the best; The Frenchman is very proud of French and everything French. The Germans and Italians think no less of their countries and many Indians imagine that India is in many ways the greatest country in the world. This is wrong. Everybody wants to think well of himself and his country. But really there is no person who has not got some good and some bad qualities. In the same way; there is no country which is not partly good and partly bad. We must take the good wherever we find it and try to remove the bad wherever it may be. We are, of course, most concerned with our own country; India unfortunately, it is in a bad way today. Many of our people are poor and unhappy. They have no joy in their lives. We have to find out how we can make them happier. We have to see what is good in our ways and and try to keep it, and whatever is bad we have to throw away. If we find anything good in other countries, we should certainly take it.

Summary

Self admiration.

In every country—Englishmen, French, Italian, Germans, and Indians think good of themselves and do not consider the rest as good. As no body is perfectly good same is the case with countries. We should eliminate poverty and misery from our country, and try to adopt good qualities wherever we find and throw the bad ones.
