

Title:

Perseverance A Roadmap to Progress

The perplexed man do nothing as he listen to others and changed his opinion and plan. He could not attain great because of his unstable attitude. In order to achieve progress, he must be stationary towards his decisions. The man who consults wisely, resolve firmly and persists his decisions boldly, would be able to achieve success. In the end, writes advisees to readers that if they take their course wisely and firmly and show perseverance over it, than their accomplishment would remain even after the sinage of Pyrenees and Alps mountains.

14. The man who is perpetually hesitating which of the two things he will do first, will do neither. The man who resolves, but suffers his resolution to be changed by the first counter-suggestions of a friend, - who fluctuates from opinion to opinion, from plan to plan, and veers like a weather-cock to every point of the compass, with every breath of caprice that blows - can never accomplish any thing great or useful. Instead of being progressive in any thing, he will be at best stationary, and more probably retrograde in all. It is only the man who first consults wisely, then resolves firmly, and then executes his purpose with flexible perseverance, undismayed by those petty difficulties which daunt a weaker spirit, that can advance to eminence in any line. Take your course wisely, but firmly; and having taken it, hold upon it with heroic resolution, and the Alps and Pyrenees will sink before you.
