

A further benefit associated with globalization is the increased access to health care. Such access to health care extends due to sharing of medical services among countries. However, the world has faced Covid pandemic in which people died all over the world. Later on, with collaboration of countries among each <sup>other,</sup> such vaccines have been made.

These vaccines have been spread through out the world which saved many lives. In fact, this is the outcome of globalization, which unite the world and ~~is~~ ensured availability of medicine. According to New York Times, more than 5.55 billion people world wide have received a dose of covid-19 vaccine which represents 72.3 percent of the world population. This is possible because of globalization. (The New York Times, Tracking Covid vaccines, 2023). In a nutshell, globalization has significantly improved health care access world wide.
