

Question: Rewrite the dialogue, written in direct speech in a paragraph form. CSS-2018.

Jack approached Swarup, who swatted away as usual and asked him to shut up his old books and came out and had a game of tennis. He apologized Jack and said that the examination were drawing near and he wanted every hour he could get for study. Jack expressed his disliking for the examinations. He did not worry about his because there was no use of them, anyway as you might get a clerkship in government office; but that's all and there were hundreds of fellows who had got their degrees and were no nearer getting jobs of any sort. This was what good would be graduation did you pray for. Swarup passionately answered that it might be so but you couldn't ^{have} get a degree if you didn't pass the examination and he had set his heart on being a graduate and he was not studying hard to pass his examination and obtain his degree but to store his mind with knowledge and develop his intellectual faculties.
