

Global trade ^{and trade} policies of China

OUTLINE

1 Introduction

Thesis Statement: China's global trade dominance, driven by a combination of export-oriented policies, strategic initiatives like the Belt and Road Initiative, and its evolving trade relationship with major partners, has transformed the dynamics of global trade, presenting both opportunities and challenges for the global economy.

2. Crunch paragraph

3- China's economic rise and global trade significance

- a. The "Open Door" policy and shift towards a socialist market economy
- b. Emergence of China as the world's largest manufacturing hub
- c. Trade surplus and its dominance in global supply chain

4. Trade policies of China are a pivotal driver of its economic rise

- a. Promoting export-led growth by offering incentives, subsidies, and tax breaks to exporters
- b. Encouraging domestic production as import substitution policy

c- manipulating currency policies to maintain exchange rate stability

d. Strengthening International Property Right, (IPRs) for economic development.

e. Facilitating trade through the Belt and Road Initiative (BRI)

f- promoting sustainable trade practices and green initiatives

g- participating in multilateral organizations and negotiations

5- Global implications of china's trade policies

a- The impact on Sino-US relations and power dynamics in the region

b- Diplomatic disputes and tensions from resource competition

c. Challenges in the adoption of common trade standards within Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP)

6- Conclusion

China's role in global trade has been nothing short of transformative over the past few decades. As the world's most populous nation and the second-largest economy, China's trade policies and practices have had a profound impact on the global economic landscape. China has not only become a global manufacturing hub but also a major player in international trade. China's trade policies have evolved dramatically since its shift toward a market-economy. China's trade policies have been multifaceted. They include export-led growth, domestic subsidies and a vast network of trade agreements. China's Belt and Road Initiative is another landmark in its trade policy. However, China's trade policies have not been without controversy. Accusations of unfair trade practices, such as currency manipulation and intellectual property theft, have strained relations with countries like United States and Europe. China is continuing to exert its influence on the world stage, shaping the future of global trade. In this dynamic landscape of global trade, understanding China's trade policies is of paramount importance. China's global trade dominance, driven by a combination of export-oriented policies, strategic initiatives like Belt and Road Initiative, and its evolving trade relationships with major partners, has transformed the dynamics of global trade, presenting both opportunities and challenges for the global economy.
