Q: Write a note on probation and parole? (10)

Introduction:

Probation and parole are both a part of restorative justice. Restorative justice aims to rehabilitate offenders and reintegrate them into the society. Various governments use the tools of probation and parole to serve such a justice system. Pakistan also uses this system. There are some inefficiencies and room for improvement in the system but the cost of improving does not exceed the benefits of restorative justice. Hence, probation and parole are important elements of criminal justice system.

What is probation?

A sentence in which, rather than being incarcerated, an offender is retained in community under supervision of a probation agency and is required to abide by rules and conditions to avoid incarceration.

What is parole?

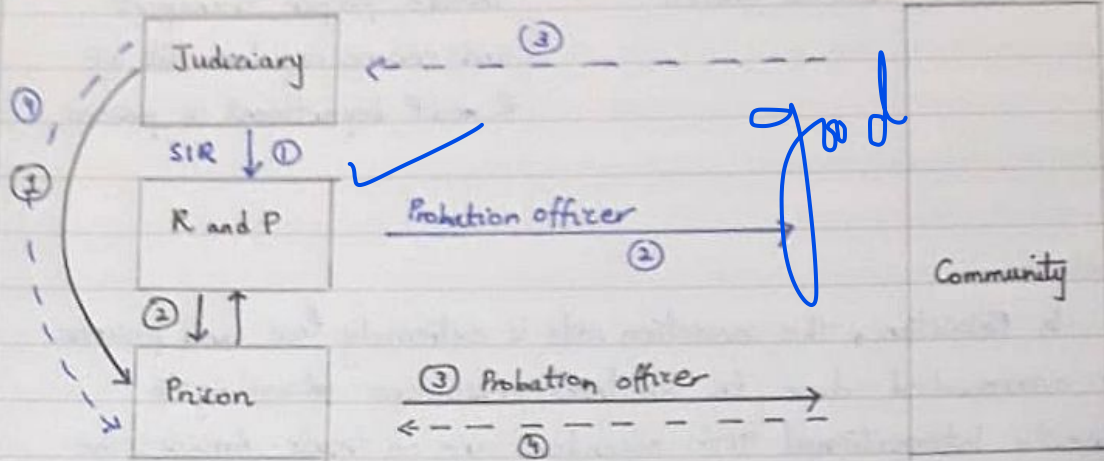

According to Black's law dictionary, parole is a method of prison release whereby inmates are released at discretion of a board or other authority before having completed their entire sentence.

(e) lack of visits to prisons

✓ Provide proper transport and ensure regular visits of R and P department to prisons

Conclusion

In Pakistan, the conviction rate is extremely low and prisons are overcrowded due to on trial prisoners according to Amnesty International 91% offenders are on trials. Amidst the inmates are also juveniles and females. In such a situation probation and parole could add efficiency to criminal justice system of Pakistan. Moreover, it could help Pakistan prosper by adding to the number of valuable citizens through proper rehabilitation. This could lead to overall uplift of society. Therefore, these systems need to be the key focus of criminal justice system of Pakistan.
