

Batch 348

Précis 2011

There is something common in multifarious <sup>psychological</sup> causes of unhappiness. A common unhappy man gets ~~so~~ narrow-minded and gives all importance to the satisfaction that he <sup>he</sup> had not gotten over others. Nowadays, man feels so disappointed that prefers diversion and ignorance over satisfaction. He just admires pleasure in passing life and opts for being <sup>unconscious</sup> to escape unhappiness. The <sup>narcissists</sup> and megalomaniac believe in the possibility of happiness through negative means. Man prefers obliviousness to pursue intoxication. <sup>primarily</sup> convince unhappy man that happiness is desirable, only a few consciously prefer unhappiness. Generally wise people who have <sup>gone</sup> through all excitements are proudly and genuinely unhappy. <sup>They</sup> Believe <sup>it is</sup> it's a natural and rational attitude. Less entitled people are doubtful about it. They believe that man satisfied with unhappiness is not unhappy.

Total words: 130

6/20

Indent the paragraph.

Sentence is structurally wrong.

Structure needs improvement. Spelling mistakes found. Avoid informal words such as doesn't, didn't, it's.