In order to find out our hidden faults, it is necessary to consider what our enemies ~~think~~ about ~~ourselves~~. Mostly, our friends praise us <sup>in</sup> line with our hearts. Firstly, <sup>either</sup> our faults do not seem odd to them or they hide the faults for our sake, so that ~~they do not~~ make us sad, or they close their eyes to them. In contrast, our enemy scrutinize ~~us~~ well and search out our faults from every nook of us. In fact, he makes a mountain out of a molehill. A friend always enhances his friend's good deeds and an enemy ~~increases~~ highlights the person's faults. Therefore, we should be obliged to move to our enemy ~~that~~ he makes us aware of our faults. From this perspective it seems that ~~an~~ enemy proves to be better than a friend.
