Cherokee: An Artifactual Place

I found it difficult in choosing my vacation tour and wanted an exciting place to tranquil. John recommended me to visit Cherokee. We took a flight and reached its town Qualla Boundary. It presented brief image of the Cherokee past. Natives helped us in exploring the traditional colours of the town displayed in their shops. We were welcomed by a middle-aged man George, who offered us lunch. We learnt from him that Cherokees livelihood ^{was} dependent on touring season and the gaming weekend - Bingo Weekend. Our final stop in the town was the museum that ^{contained} artifactory and symbols of Cherokees cosmology. Back at home, I really missed it and would like to visit another exotic place. Passiveness: The Greatest Evil

All the evils in the world are by those persons who keep on doing but they do not know the purpose of their doing. Being a busiest creature is like devil that hates laziness. I do not think laziness is responsible for all the fuss of the world but are passive ones. who infuse lethargicness in the energetic world. Our leaders instead of solving the problems through active life, they focus on resolving them by passiveness and still enjoy good reputation. We believe in our politicians. It is a tragedy to say that all the religious conferences against mighty evils are attended by such persons who mock. It is better for them to sit idle and recover their mental health. (120 words).
