Title: Oracles: The Voice of Greek Gods

The author describes the need for diviners to interpret the power of God for humans. The need was awakened by the fascination with the God's power and the fear of unknown. Therefore, the priests were appointed in ancient Greece to decode the power signs of God. However, there were times when the Godly sign did not appear in the usual way but transcended into possessed human soul to reveal the revelations. These methods of predicting the future served as the foundation for the ancient Greek oracles. Every oracle was provided with very well-organized shelter and had a close relationship with one or more God's.
