Morality of Manto's Writings

Manto face rivalry and legal battles for the moral validity of his writings. He was not discouraged by negativity. Instead he remained strong against the world. He felt anxious about lower social class. He made bridge with reader through addressing moral issues. He was concerned with duality of human nature in different situations. He stated sensitive issues without thinking them vulgar. Every person can feel manto's writing and can relate to it.

Machines and their Use

The great defect of civilization is that it does not know what to do with knowledge. Science has given power but human use it like children. Man does not know what to do with machine.

Machines are to serve but becoming master as they need to be taken care. They must be fed with coal, oil and gas if they do not get they refuse to work. Machines gives more time and one makes more machines. Instead of this one should try to be civilized.

Being civilized meant making beautiful things like thinking freely, living rightly and maintaining justice. Man has better chance to achieve them with help of machines and civilization undoubtedly be the greater.

Political poetry and its themes

The beauty of the poetry is that it deals with events affecting huge number of public rather than personal experience. The poet dealing with public themes may himself be concerned. His inspiration to write about them is different from writing about his own concerns. He has to give his own version of something, shared by others; however, he can not avoid depending on the knowledge from second hand. Political poets deal and interpret present rather than imaginary past. The gap between him and his subject cannot be crossed. The selection of such poetry has to be guided about what matters and what does not. Sometimes poet sees things from private to imaginatively angle and political poetry moves between this and its history.
