Essay

Undoubtedly, life owes its colours to the existence of women. If mothers, sisters and wives do not exist on earth, the life will cease to exist. They hold so much importance in society. It would be incorrect to regard them as a weak. Still words like frailty, weakness, and delicate have stuck with women for centuries. In this context, there are several reasons of women as frail. These include lesser muscular strength as compared to men, and patriarchal society pushing women to subservient roles. Likewise, limited women representation in politics clips the wings of women to play a role in politics. However, today women is not frail on the several grounds including headstrong women successfully working in non-traditional field and proving their mettle in literature. Similarly, women have stolen the spotlight from ~~women~~ men in the world of science, and sports. Women in armed Personnel is a remarkable strides. In brief, this essay will provide all the reasons why women are considered frail; instead they ~~are~~ the muse hold up half the sky.
