

Impacts of

Radicalized army and diversified identities

The writer of 'Pakistan A Hard Country' described that if Pakistan army is demoralized which is enough to break the solidarity of a country. Army may encounter moral dilemma when their loyalty to superiors conflicts with their religious beliefs. As army commander, sometimes, failed to issue orders of resistance against US attack. This is due already subordination to US demands which affected army's morale and inflicted mutiny among them. Therefore, when army is divided, then it is highly possible that ~~the~~ ^{these} could be religious uprising and state could collapse. Resultantly, there would be rebellion and civil war rather than successful revolution. Moreover, Pakistan is stuck in identity circle. Therefore, if one ^{wants to} brought revolution, result is unfaithful because of mismatched identities ~~of~~ within a country. Similarly, Islamic revolution is also unfruitful as different types of Islam has emerged in Pakistan. Hence, diversity of identity diversification hinders the gateway of unity.
