

Negative Impact of sectarian war in Pakistan

Pakistan is facing many problems, sectarian war is one of them. In the world, it is easy to control state wars and economic wars but sectarian war is most difficult to control because it is related to individuals faiths, believes and emotions. Furthermore, recent clashes between Sunni and Shia muslims have created hurdles for government in Gilgit Baltistan. Government had to deploy police, army and FC in GB so that peaceful environment can be created. On the other hand, Pakistan is facing economic crisis and security issues, if sectarian problems will also rise it will be hard for government to create economic stability in country. Therefore, CM of Gilgit Baltistan is trying his best to control on sectarian wars.
